

We Already KNOW It's Dead Flat

"We're HRS guys. We operated the first 1/2" x 96" wide temper mill in the country in the late 90's, so we know tempering. Tempering is great, but it's an art and very operator dependent. Stretcher leveling is more of a science and all about brute force. We've seen plenty of shape "induced" into a HRS coil from a temper mill. There is no question that the tempered material is a great product, but the Stretcher is virtually bulletproof. The Stretcher is more user friendly, easier to operate, and cheaper to maintain. When work orders are completed, we no longer ask how the material came out. We already know. It's dead flat."
